

McDougall - Parry Sound - Seguin

Starting your Home Based Business

What is a Home Based Business?

All three municipalities in the Parry Sound Area Development Community allow occupants of dwellings to conduct businesses from their homes. Allowing new businesses to start at home and to grow into successful operations is part of all three municipality's economic development strategies. Generally, home based businesses are commercial activities that occur within a residential dwelling located in a residential or rural area of a municipality. In McDougall and Seguin, some home industries are also permitted in accessory buildings without requiring a rezoning. Some of the uses that are considered appropriate for home based businesses include offices of professions like an accountant or doctor, consulting services, music or dance instruction, creation of crafts, hair salon, distribution sales office, high tech and computer services, and similar gainful occupations.

What rules would apply to my Home Based Business?

Standards for home based businesses are intended to balance the interests of the business entrepreneur and preserving the quiet and safe residential character of the streets and neighbourhoods of the three communities. Each municipal zoning by-law does this by regulating the amount of floor space that can be dedicated to the business within the dwelling, limiting the number of employees who do not live in the house, and listing the types of uses that are permitted. Additional regulations address the parking required for the business, maximum number of commercial vehicles permitted, prohibiting nuisance impacts, and hours for deliveries. The rules of each municipality are similar, but slightly different, so you will need to check them out at the municipal office.

What do I need to do to start my Home Based Business?

There is no business licensing currently required by Parry Sound, McDougall or Seguin for home based business or home industries. You should, however, contact your municipal office to check out the rules around home based businesses and home industries to confirm that your business will be permitted under the current Zoning By-law rules. Certain business are not permitted to be home based and therefore would have to be located in commercial or industrial areas. Better to check out the rules with your municipal staff before you start!

When its time to grow – what should I do?

You started your home based business, things are going great, but you are running out of room. When your business out-grows your home and property, it is time to start looking for a commercial or industrial site in the community to take your business to the next stage of growth.
